Chris Janssen is an expert in administrative and organizational questions in NGOs, merely addressing quality management and internationalization. As former policy advisor he was responsible for the policy fields of community development, youth, education, voluntary services and intercultural dialogue. Nowadays Chris Janssen works on strategy and development in strategic policy frameworks and regional/international cooperation. Public private cooperation, network development (triple helix) and organizational development are his main points of interest.

Via EURICON (NL), and previously the Centre for European Studies and Education (CESO), he is working as a consultant for local and provincial governments and NGO's. Project development, fund raising and providing business advice are the most important services offered, mostly in third sector and/or the governmental sector.

Chris Janssen has a degree in business administration and a MA-degree in comparative European social studies. Also he has taken part and/or coordinated in several European projects like ACT!, ACT-NET, Intercoop, Eguidya, DEVOTED, EXACT, Learning Community, SAVE, Kunst Verbind(e)t and LION.
