Gabriella Pappadà is the Director and senior researcher of Ceres.

She graduated in Economics at the University of Rome “Sapienza” in 2000. Since then she has constantly been working in the field of labour economics and European projects.

She got a PhD in economics at the same University in 2004.

Labour economist, specialist for empirical economic research and EU strategies. The activity of research focuses in particular on labour flexibility, precarious employment, flexicurity, pension systems, employment and unemployment by gender, age and level of education, knowledge economy, lifelong learning. The possibility to collaborate with several universities and research centres and to participate in many international conferences has allowed the acquisition of cooperation, communication and analytical skills, and the ability to think critically and strategically. Author and editor of many project reports and publications in Italian and English, including the Labour economics Papers published by Franco Angeli.

Gabriella Pappadà is also an expert in the planning and management of European projects focusing in particular on the areas of labour, education and training.

So far Gabriella Pappadà has been involved as project planner or researcher in more than 20 projects funded by the European Commission.
