

Sharon Guan

Institution: DePaul University
Address: 2350 N Kenmore Ave
Postal Code: Chicago, IL60614
Country: USA
Tel: +1-773-325-7726
Fax: +1-773-325-7869
Email: xquan@depaul.edu
Web: <http://fits.depaul.edu>

Dr Sharon Guan is the director of the department of Faculty Instructional Technology Services and a Chinese Language instructor of the Modern Language Department at DePaul University in the United States.

Dr Guan received her undergraduate degree in International Journalism from Beijing Broadcasting Institute (China Media University) and her master's and Ph.D. degree in Curriculum, Instruction and Educational Technology from Indiana State University.

As a leader of faculty development and technology services, she leads a team of instructional designers, multimedia developers, and technology trainers to provide consultation and training services to faculty on the use cognitive theories, instructional design methods, and educational technology to enhance teaching and learning.

She has fifteen years experiences in the field of eLearning, instructional design, and faculty development. She has published and presented research papers on learning science, course design, game-based education, ePortfolio, and faculty development and is one of the editors of The Handbook of Technological Pedagogical Content Knowledge for Educators.

She has served on the technology committee of American Association of Colleges for Teaching Education and was invited by the Department of Education of China as guest speaker for the first Learning Science Conference in China.