Elisabeth Wulff Sahlén

Elisabeth Wulff Sahlén is a lecturer in English language and linguistics at Mälardalen University, Sweden.

She received her M.A. in English language and linguistics from Stockholm University in 1999, and has been teaching at universities in Sweden ever since.

Over the years Elisabeth Wulff Sahlén has developed a growing interest in using ICT to enhance learning. As a teacher, she is constantly seeking to develop her own teaching practice by exploring different ways to integrate ICT in on-campus education.

Establishing ways for teachers to share their knowledge and experience of ICT is very important to Elisabeth. She is currently involved in developing and teaching in-service courses where ICT plays an important role. Elisabeth Wulff Sahlén also provides guidance and inspiration for implementing the use of ICT on the teacher training program.

Elisabeth Wulff Sahlén is also working on a doctoral thesis within the field of cognitive linguistics, where she explores the meaning of body part lexemes in English and Swedish.
