Merike Saar is an educational technologist at Tallinn University of Technology and has been also working as a teacher trainer and teacher of English. Together with her colleagues she has compiled textbooks and electronic teaching materials.

She graduated from Tallinn Pedagogical University in 1992 and got her MA in translation from Eurouniversity in 2004. Since then she has constantly been working in the field of language teaching and ICT.

Merike Saar has compiled several English language textbooks for Estonian secondary schools and different electronic materials to promote language teaching as well as the use of ICT in classroom. She has been involved in teacher training for over a decade.

Merike Saar is often invited as a speaker or expert at different conferences in Estonia to present her experience in language teaching and the use of ICT. She also runs seminars and workshops to help lecturers and teachers in the use of different programmes and learning environments (creating interactive tests, quizzes, etc; building e-courses in Blackboard and Moodle teaching environments; using wikis for cooperation, material development and teaching; etc.).

She is also involved as an expert in quality management and external evaluator for e-courses and learning objects produced with the help of Primus programme.
