Amal Abou-Setta is an Educational Research PhD student at Lancaster University. She graduated in English Language and Literature from Ain Shams University in Egypt in 1996 and got a Master's Degree in Teaching English as a Foreign Language from the American University in Cairo, Egypt in 2004.

Since obtaining her BA, Amal Abou-Setta has gained considerable experience in teaching English, writing and critical thinking in different universities and language institutions to different age groups. She has also been part of the small start-up team of the English department at the British University in Egypt.

Amal Abou-Setta currently works as a Teacher Trainer at the American University in Cairo, Egypt where she conducts one-to-one field supervision.

Amal Abou-Setta has delivered several faculty training lectures/workshops at different universities and conferences both inside and outside Egypt. Among the delivered workshops were ones on "Academic Integrity", "Classroom Management", "Assessment and ILOs in Practice", "Effective Public Speaking Skills", "Facebook as a Writing Medium for Students" and "Plagiarism Between Perception & Practice".

Amal Abou-Setta's research interests include the impact of the medium of instruction on social identity, indigenous language(s), knowledge systems, and social (in)equalities. She is also interested in educational reform policies, particularly those relevant to the democratization of education.

Besides being a certified Arabic/English translator, Amal Abou-Setta has also recently got certified in Teaching Arabic as a Foreign Language and gained some experience in the field.

Amal Abou-Setta is a proud Egyptian Revolutionist!
