Emilie Resink is an educational developer at Waag Society. She graduated in Dutch Language and Literature at the University of Nijmegen in 2004. After having worked as a high school teacher in Dutch Language and Literature for 5 years, she got the opportunity at Waag Society's Creative Learning Lab to participate in innovative projects for education.

Waag Society develops creative technology for social innovation. The foundation researches, develops concepts, pilots and prototypes and acts as an intermediate between the arts, science and the media. Waag Society's Creative Learning Lab (CLL) introduces educators, children and young people to applied creative technology, which they learn to use through experimentation.

Emilie is involved in CLL's training program, workshops, publications and seminars, not only to promote the great potential of contemporary digital education, but also to mobilize and inspire SME. She is also responsible for educational content in different projects of Waag Society concerning creative technology and learning.
