Ligia Sarivan is a senior researcher in the Curriculum Department of the Institute for Educational Sciences, Bucharest.

She graduated in Foreign Languages and Literatures (1985) and obtained a PhD (1998) from the University of Bucharest. She has been teaching French and English at all levels of education and since 1998 she has been involved in teacher training as well as in the management of teacher training programs.

Ligia Sarivan has been among the first in Romania to promote blended learning teacher training programs. She has recently coordinated two innovative teacher training programs: an online course to implement new methodological approaches to the development of key competences at <http://training.ise.ro/> and a blended learning master program at <http://platforma.masterprof.ro/>.

She has been invited in a number of South Eastern European countries to support curriculum development and teacher training.

Ligia Sarivan is very active in developing research partnerships among university professors, master students in language education and teachers in schools.

She has published many articles and chapters in books on a variety of educational topics - multiple intelligences, curriculum development, blended learning, innovative methodology. She is also the author of several resources and online materials for student teachers.
