Martina Jarkovská graduated in English and Czech from Faculty of Arts at Charles University in Prague in 1999. She received her Ph.D. in English language studies at the same university in 2008.

Since 2001 she has been a senior lecturer of the Department of Languages at the Czech University of Life Sciences in Prague. Before joining the university she taught English and Czech at other types of schools, especially grammar and language schools.

Currently, she specializes in teaching general English and English for specialist purposes and also Czech for foreigners. Beside general English she teaches English in agriculture, English in computing, Czech for the incoming students of Erasmus – beginners and pre-intermediate or advanced students.

She regularly participates in summer schools of the Czech language for Erasmus students. She has taken part in various teacher mobilities and undergone several study and work stays abroad. At present she is one of the co-authors of the project of Online Study Support for the Subject of Business English supported by the Fund of Higher Education Development of the Czech Republic.
