Christine Fredriksson is working as a German lecturer at the department for Languages and Media at Dalarna University/Sweden. Since July 2010 she is responsible for the teacher education program for teachers in German as a Foreign Language at Dalarna University.

She graduated in German Linguistics with a PhD in Foreign Language Acquisition from the University of Uppsala in 2006. Her research interest is the acquisition and development of grammatical structures in learner language.

Christine Fredriksson has long experience with teaching German as a foreign language at Swedish upper secondary school and at Swedish University. She is part in several research groups which examine language and language use in computer-mediated communication.

Her current project is to investigate the use and influence of Information and Communication Technologies in German/foreign language classrooms in Swedish secondary school.
