Brigitte Plomteux has a master's degree in German and Dutch from Liège University. Since graduating in 1983 she has always worked as a teacher, mainly in higher vocational education, teaching bachelors in foreign trade, accountancy and marketing.

Her main areas of interest are how languages are learned, the acquisition of vocabulary, and methodology. She has developed many activities integrating multiple intelligences and learning cycles.

In the last few years, she has developed a Moodle course for remediation classes in Dutch, and has started using an interactive white board.

Among the projects are further developing the Moodle course, gradually shifting the present focus on grammar to include among others more audio activities.
