Wim de Boer is the coordinator for educational projects within the Afûk Institute for the Frisian Language. Currently he works on the development of a new and innovative package of flexible and (partly) digital learning materials for Frisian language learning within primary education.

He graduated in Educational Sciences and Technology's from the University of Twente in 1998. He completed his Ph.D. at that same university in 2004 on the use of ICT for flexible learning.

In recent years he worked within the Netherlands, Africa (Mozambique) and South America (Ecuador) on projects within primary, secondary and higher education, always focused on educational change and innovation. His interest lies in competencies of teachers, teacher networks and the role of ICT to enhance learning strategies and organization.

Wim participated in many international conferences, has published in books and journals and is responsible for a number of websites. A summary can be found on: www.wimdeboer.nl
