Claudia Borghetti is Adjunct Lecturer in Language Learning and Teaching and teacher of academic writing at the School of Foreign Languages and Literature, Interpreting and Translation, University of Bologna, Italy.

She holds a M.A. in language and intercultural learning through telecollaboration from the University of Bologna, and a Ph.D. in Foreign Language Teaching from the National University of Ireland, Galway with a dissertation titled 'A Methodological Model for Intercultural Foreign Language Education: From Practice to Theory'.

Claudia Borghetti is project manager of the IEREST Project (Intercultural Education Resources for Erasmus Students and their Teachers), <http://ierest-project.eu/>, co-funded by the European Commission under the Lifelong Learning Programme (2012-2015).

From 2009 to 2012, she worked as assistant coordinator of the PAISÀ Project (Platform for Corpus-Assisted Italian Language Learning), co-funded by FIRB (Italian National Fund for Research).

She researches on intercultural language learning and teaching, teaching Italian as a foreign/second language, English as a Lingua Franca, and information and communication technologies in language teaching and learning.

She also works as teacher trainer and taught Italian as a second/foreign language for nine years.
