Donovan Babin is the E-Learning Coordinator and an English Teacher for the Bielefeld University Language Center in Bielefeld, Germany.

He was born and raised in New Orleans in the USA and has lived and worked in Germany for the last 7 years. He holds degrees in Philosophy and English from the US and England and has worked semi-professionally in IT continually since 1995.

Donovan teaches English at the University level. His focus is developing methods and technological solutions for teaching and learning languages for today's busy and overloaded student and within the rapidly evolving learning system. He is especially interested in the application of gaming theories to education.

So far Donovan has been working with pre-existing platforms like 2nd Life, Moodle and Skype, but hopes to develop programs and platforms to expand upon their innate limitations. Additionally, he has developed and coordinated partnerships with Universities in Europe and the United States and is always looking for more international collaborators.
