Margaret Fowler is Director Examinations at the British Council Italy.

She graduated in French at the University of Wales in 1979 and after completing a PGCE in TEFL she has worked in Italy in the field of English language teaching and teacher training. In 2001 she completed an MBA with the Open University.

For the last 18 years Margaret has headed the British Council Examinations Service which runs exams for over 42,000 candidates each year from schools, companies and universities all over Italy. The majority of these exams are run on behalf of the University of Cambridge and IELTS, examination boards producing English Language exams which are recognised by schools and universities in Italy for credits towards degrees and for admission purposes for courses delivered in English all over the world including the USA.

Margaret Fowler has also worked as a teacher trainer and is often invited to conferences to talk about classroom practice and qualifications for both teachers and students. She has also written a number of ELT books for Italian publishers.
