Alicia Morales Ortiz is full professor of Greek Philology at the University of Murcia, (Department of Classical Studies) where she teaches ancient and modern Greek since 1995.

Her research interests are Plutarch of Chaeronea, Greek Tragedy, Spanish Humanism and the Classical Tradition and Modern Greek Language and Literature (mainly the 1930 Generation). She has published a variety of translations, papers and studies related to these topics.

She is currently the editorial secretary of the journal Estudios Neogriegos and a member of the directing board of the Hispanic Society of Modern Greek Studies.

She coordinates the modern Greek courses at the Language Service of the University of Murcia, and has taken part in several projects designing modern Greek didactic materials in cooperation with other European institutions. She has directed the Odysseus Project for the Dissemination of Modern Greek Learning and Teaching, funded by the European Commission and coordinated by the University of Murcia (2008 and 2009).
