Edit Rohonczi is the Director of International Relations at Dennis Gabor College

She graduated from Lorand Eotvos University in 1987. She started her career with working in the not-for-profit sector, managing programmes in the area of higher education development in Central Europe. Later she worked and studied at Harvard University in the field of the non-profit management. In 2002 she completed the Higher Education Management programme of the Open University, UK.

From 2001 she worked as Academic Director of the Open Business School in Budapest, supporting hundreds of students in their BA/MBA studies, and also managing a large number of professional trainings.

Due to her relevant work and project management experience, Edit Rohonczi also serves as a registered expert of European Union projects in the field of Higher Education. She was granted a Senior Leader scholarship by the Hungarian American Enterprise Scholarship Fund with the help of which she conducted research on strategic planning and curriculum development at Harvard University and on adult education methodologies at UCLA.

Edit Rohonczi's research field is lifelong learning, the interaction of higher education and adult education, and the internationalisation of higher education. Since 2009 she has worked as expert for the EU Education, Audiovisual and Culture Executive Agency in Brussels.
