

Learning Programs: Mobility and International Projects or Personal Growth and Territorial Development

Valentina Tornabene, Loriana Cavaleri, Elena Milio

Send (Italia)

info@sendsicilia.it

A scheme so extensive, thinking to the international projects and mobility as part of a wider path, bringing together the individual growth and territorial development, can redefine both the roles of those involved in the organisation and implementation of projects/mobility (companies, local authorities promoters, intermediary and hosting organisations) and the type of actions which can be activated. In this sense there are two main lines of actions:

- stimulating greater involvement of the territory, so to develop and articulate the training needs in relation to the possibility of using the instrument of international projects and mobility. So the international projects and mobility as services, as a policy implemented at the local level, and becoming structural moment in vocational education and training.
- The role of intermediary institutions as subjects of guidance for the territory, as a node interface between the external input (institutions-projects - the proposed activities abroad, exchanges) and the local environment that welcomes them, which is redirected to organizations working in the field of reference and vice versa.