Rachel Crease is an educational designer at Charles Sturt University, Learning and Teaching Services working in the Faculty of Education. Before joining CSU in 2004, Rachel worked as an editor at the Open University, UK.

During the last three years, Rachel has worked with the School of Information Studies to design new online courses for distance education students. Rachel works closely with course teams on integrating online learning activities into their distance education programs, and improving communication between students, their peers and their lecturers.

Rachel has presented papers on the subject of using various technologies in online learning at conferences and seminars in Australia, most recently ASCILITE 2011 (Australasian Society for Computers in Learning in Tertiary Education) in Hobart.
