Amith Khandakar is a Teaching Faculty at Qatar University at the Foundation Program for Computing program.

He graduated in Electronics and Telecommunication Engineering in 2008 from North South University in Dhaka, Bangladesh. He was the President Gold Medal Recipient (Valedictorian) in 2008 Convocation. His main area of specialization is Wireless Networking.

He has been teaching at Qatar University since 2010.He has been always working on methods or techniques that could help students to understand things in a better way and also to make sure that language is not a barrier in educating one. He believes that if a proper method could be used in teaching that no matter how being a bit poor in your English language skills will not prevent a student from improving or doing good in the courses.
