Aase Holmgaard is a psychologist at PsykologCentret, Denmark.

Aase Holmgaard graduated from the Danish University of Education in 1999. She is a member of the Danish Psychological Association and has worked as a psychologist for over 12 years.

Aase has been a project manager at VIA University College, Denmark, and has participated in a number of projects involving children's well-being and learning. In 2008, Aase was awarded a PhD degree in psychopedagogy with a thesis focusing on children's experiences of having reading difficulties.

As a psychologist, Aase works with individual therapy and supervision as well as training and education for teachers and special needs assistants. She has published several articles on the topic of reading difficulties and plays a key role in academic research in this field. Aase has wide experience with development projects and is currently a consultant for two projects on the use of IT and animation in working with people with reading difficulties.
