Kevin Woolley is an Assistant Professor at Virginia Commonwealth University in Qatar.

Kevin is an award-winning interior designer having completed commercial projects encompassing nearly 3 million square feet of interior space. From business to ethics, he brings a wealth of knowledge to the classroom to teach a new generation of young and talented designers.

Kevin has a master's degree in instructional technology from Utah State University and bachelors of fine arts degree in interior design from Brigham Young University. Kevin is currently a member of the Interior Design Educators Counsel (IDEC). He has been affiliated with the following professional organizations located in the United States: CIDA, IIDA, ASID, IFMA.

Kevin's research topic focuses on the intersections of knowledge, design and society. Kevin's objective is to examine design pedagogies by looking at "What is being taught?" "How is it being taught?" and "What are the outcomes?" - within the context of rapidly changing economic models and global technologies.

He is currently working on a PhD in Curriculum and Instruction at New Mexico State University's school of Education.
