Francisco Simões is a PhD Student of the Faculty of Psychology and Educational Sciences of the University of Coimbra. Since 2010 he is developing a research project about the impact of school mentoring in the development of children and youth at-risk. His research interests are children and youth mentoring, youth perspectives on adult's authority and deviant behavior.

Before, he worked for 5 years as a community projects manager in Caritas da Ilha Terceira. He is also experienced as a teacher trainer and a clinical psychology practitioner.

He is co-author of papers, manuals and posters published in Canada, Brasil, Italy and, of course, Portugal, among others. He has also presented research projects and studies in several international conferences and meetings.
