Professor Cheng is currently Professor and Associate Vice-president (Academic Affairs), at the Hong Kong Institute of Education. She is also a member at the Department of Science and Environmental Studies. Her main areas of research are teacher education and science education. She researches inquiry learning, assessment for learning, and the nature of science with a focus in teacher learning and teacher professional development. She has published extensively in international refereed journals, and book chapters on science education and teacher education. More recently, she has published an edited book Science Education in International Contexts, which highlights the contribution of science education researchers from Asia and international contexts.

Professor Cheng participates and contributes actively to the international science education arena. She is currently Vice President of the East Asian Science Education Association (EASE). She is on the editorial boards of the Journal of Quality School Education, the Asia-Pacific Forum on Science Learning and Teaching, the International Journal of Quantitative Research in Education published by Inderscience Publishers, and the Asian Journal of Educational Research and Synergy (AJERS) published by the Philippine Society for Educational Research and Evaluation (PSERE).
